

Joshua Project

Bringing Definition to the Unfinished Task

Over 6,900 people groups are still considered unreached.

What is Joshua Project?

Jesus' last command "to go and make disciples of all the nations" raises several questions: Who are the nations? Which ones do not have disciples? Who is to go? Joshua Project exists to help answer these questions.

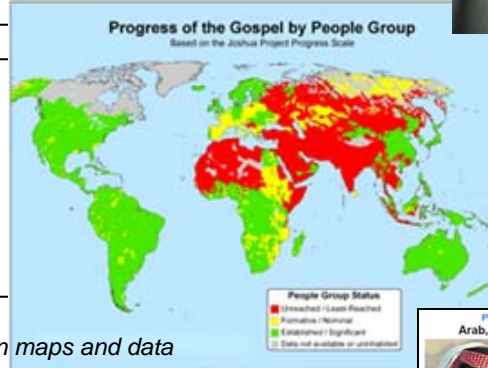

The purpose of Joshua Project is to bring definition to the unfinished task of completing the Great Commission. This is done by identifying and highlighting the people groups of the world that have the least exposure to the Gospel and the least Christian presence in their midst.

What does Joshua Project do?

- Provides a "big-picture" view of the Great Commission
- Catalyzes pioneer church planting among the least-reached
- Encourages informed focused prayer on the unreached
- Stimulates vision for missions involvement
- Suggests avenues for engagement with unreached peoples
